

Amanda (Blackledge) Barak is a Senior Instructor in the Legal Division of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Centers, Glynco, Georgia, where she teaches legal courses to federal officers and agents of more than ninety partner organizations. Topics include constitutional law, criminal law, and use of force. She is a former city attorney for the City of St. Marys, Georgia where she also served as the City's solicitor and created and managed a Pretrial Intervention and Diversion Program for first time non-violent offenders. Ms. Barak regularly facilitated training for the City's police force to include topics such as DUI prosecution.

While living overseas in Singapore for five years, Ms. Barak worked as a public affairs specialist for the U.S. Navy where she worked hand in hand with key Navy leaders as part of the installation leadership team. She also volunteered as a Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Victim Advocate for the Navy.

Ms. Barak is a registered neutral with the Georgia Office of Dispute Resolution where she mediates general civil as well as domestic cases ordered to mediation by courts within Georgia. She also serves as a mediator for the Department of Homeland Security.

Ms. Barak attended law school at St. Thomas University School of Law in Miami Gardens, Florida, and after graduation served on their administration team as the Director of Alumni Affairs. She is a member of the State Bar of Georgia and the Florida Bar. Ms. Barak is married to a Special Agent (Ret.) with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service.