

Janelle Miller

Executive Security Professional

Janelle Miller is an executive security professional with 20+ years of global security leadership experience in the FBI and the private industry. Ms. Miller specializes in risk and crisis management. Over her career, she has led multiple national and international national security investigations. Ms. Miller oversaw the FBI's role in the National Special Security Events for the Papal visit in 2015 and the Democratic National Convention in 2016. Her career accomplishments include receiving the FBI Director award for Investigative Excellence and the Attorney General award for Distinguished Service. Ms. Miller served overseas as the Assistant Legal Attache in Pakistan and Bosnia, Supervisory Special Agent in Los Angeles in Counterterrorism, Unit Chief in the Counterterrorism and Criminal Divisions, Assistant Special Agent in Charge of the Counterterrorism and Crisis Management programs in the Philadelphia Field Office and retired out of her role as the Section Chief in the Directorate of Intelligence running the HUMINT program. In her current role as the Director of Global Security at TIME, she has built and implemented a global security infrastructure. Ms. Miller participates in several women in security committees and mentoring groups. Ms. Miller served as a police officer after obtaining her master's degree in criminal justice.